

Peace Pilgrim Returns to Southwestern

With all her worldly possessions in the pockets of her tunic top, the Peace Pilgrim returns for a visit to Winfield and the Southwestern College campus this week. She previously spoke in Winfield in 1970.

Dressed in navy blue slacks, shirt, and tunic, the silver haired woman walks for world peace. She clocked 25,000 miles for world peace several years ago, but she continues to walk.

She has vowed, "I shall remain a wanderer until mankind has learned the way of peace, walking until I am given shelter and fasting until I am given food."

She walks without a penny in her pockets, and she is not affiliated with any organization. She walks as a prayer and as a chance to inspire others to pray and work for peace.

Peace Pilgrim will be on the Southwestern College campus until Saturday. In addition to an interview at 10:30 a.m. Thursday on KNIC radio, she will answer questions on an open line to the campus FM radio station. Anyone wishing to pose a question to the Peace Pilgrim may call KSWC FM (88.3 on the dial) at 221-1070 between 9 and 10 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

VISIT WITH PEACE PILGRIM — "There is a magic formula for resolving conflicts. It is this: Have as your objective the resolving of the conflict—not the gaining of advantage. There is a magic formula for avoiding conflicts. It is this: Be concerned that you do not offend—not that you are not offended," might be what Peace Pilgrim
